

Benefits of Having Marble Worktop

Used in the construction of one of the Seven Wonders of the World the Taj Mahal marble is known for its elegance and beauty. Essentially limestone containing dolomite and calcite, marble can add richness to any room. Formed due to natural crystallization over long periods, marble has been preferred by artists for creating beautiful palaces, mansions, castles and statues. Though marble worktops are still considered to be an expensive addition to any home, in recent times they have become quite affordable and are being used by average individuals to add a touch of class in their homes.

There are two options available to people selecting marble worktops for their homes. The first variety of marble worktops are crafted out of large blocks of natural marble that has to be placed on a high strength cabinet formation. These marble worktops, made of a single stone, are very expensive but with little bit of care could last many lifetimes. The second variety of marble worktops are usually made by assembling many marble tiles on a concrete base. As the construction of such worktops requires less marble, they are cheaper but are more susceptible to damage if heavy or extremely hot articles are placed on the marble tiles.

So if you want to add a rich feel to your home then select marble worktops as they offer the following benefits.

Besides mesmerising beauty, these marble worktops can add sophistication, class and elegance to any room, especially kitchens.

Contrary to popular belief, it is now possible to get different coloured marble, besides the usual classic white that could blend with your overall room decor. So now you have the option of selecting dark shades such as purple, blue and black besides the more preferred lighter shades like gold, grey and pinks.

You have the option to select marble of different textures and finishes from various countries across the world such as Britain, France and China, Spain and the most popular Italian and Indian marbles.

As marble is a natural stone, it is more resistant to temperature variations and is used to create strong marble worktops that are also long lasting.

Marble worktops have extremely soft and smooth finishes, and their brightness can be maintained by regular polishing.

As more and more people are now being tempted into owning marble worktops for their homes, there is a growing trend of decorating homes using cultured marble, which is not only less expensive but is also more resistant to liquid spills and chemicals when compared to natural marble. Cultured marble worktops are constructed by crushing natural marble chips and mixing them with polyester, calcium carbonate, resins and other materials. These manufactured cultured marble worktops are scratch resistant and moisture resistant, and are also easy to repair in case of any cracks or breakages. Cultured marble worktops let one enjoy the beauty of marble without actually causing a dent in the bank account. So if you plan to wow your home visitors then consider adding marble worktops in your home decor.
